A PARTY SPLIT.

The Political Outlook in the State of Alabama.

DEMOCRATS ARE NOT HARMONIOUS.

Kolbites and the Regulars Are Still at Odds.

EFFORTS AT COMPROMISE.

Correspondence of The Evening Star.

Unless all signs fail, too, it will be the bitterest campaign in the state's political history. It is feared if the breach now existing footing that actual bloodshed may result.

It is still the old fight between the Kolbites or the alliance element led by Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, their twice defeated candidate for governor, and the regular old line organized democracy, led by the old party war horses. It was this latter element that put Gov. Jones into office last year, or at least that is what the alliance men say. As yet the regular democracy has no avowed candidate for governor, although it seems to be generally believed that Congressman William C. Oates of the third district, will be the regular party nominee. He has al-ready signified his willingness to accept the nomination if tendered him. He is regarded as the strongest democratic leader in Alacratic party in this state, unless peace is patched up, may result in many things. It may end in the defeat of the regular democracy's candidates and the election of Capt. Kolb as governor, or it may result in bloodshed; or it may allow the republicans, negroes and populists to pool issue and elect state officers. It may mean political upheaval and revolution in state affairs. Politicians generally feel that the crisis in the matter of the control of the state's affairs is rapidly approaching. The Cause of the Spill.

cause of the split in democracy's ranks is generally known. Capt. Kolb, the leader of the alliance element, was barely defeated for the democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1890. His defeat was only accomplished by all the other candidates pool-ing issues and uniting their strength on Gov. Jones, who was nominated and elected Last year Kolb was again a candidate, and so was Jones. Kolb declared that he had been swindled out of the nomination in 1830, and when he saw he would not be nominated in 1832 his delegates bolted the democratic convention and nominated bim on an independent ticket. He made the race and lacked only 11,000 votes of defeat ing Gov. Jones, the regular nominee. Then Capt. Kolb and many of his lieutenants supported the Weaver electoral ticket. However, many of those who voted for Koll for governor came back into the party and voted for Cleveland and the national elec-tors. These were declared by the state democratic executive committee as being reinstated to the party.

Last May the state executive committee of the Jeffersonian democrats, as those who followed Capt. Kolo last year call themselves, met here, and drew up a propo-sition which was presented to the regular state democratic executive committee. The proposition contained a pin looking for re-uniting the two factions of the party. By it the Jeffersonians proposed that a state primary election be held next March and that all white men be allowed to participare in it; it was to be a primary for the nomination of state officers, the nominees of it to be the regular democratic candidates. The two state committees and the dem cratic leaders as being a slar in the face for the Sayre election law that was passed by the democrats in the last

A Hard Nut to Crack. The regular state committee has a hard nut to crack in the matter of reuniting the party and their action is awaited with interest.

Meanwhile the people's party is preparing to hold a big state convention here early in October. Chairman Gaither says fully Correspondence of The Evening Star.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., September 30, 1893.

Although the next election for governor and other state officers in Alabama does not take place until the first Monday in August, 1894, the campaign has already been since that faction has begun making over-tures to the regular democracy.

It is said the republicans, too, are prepar-ing to put a full state ticket in the field.

If the two democratic factions fail to get together and each nominates a separate in the democratic party is not healed and the republicans and populists the two factions gotten together on an equal put up candidates, too, the race will be a lively one. Trouble would undoubtedly result.

The democratic party in Alabama has reached a crisis in its history. It must soon be determined whether it is to remain divided or be again united. To remain divided will mean, many leaders assert, the defeat of the party at the polls and the triumph of negro rule. To unite the factions waters say means the election of tions, voters say, means the election of Kolb and a set of alliance officers, who last year voted for Weaver and fought the reg-ular democracy. Republican primaries were held in the everal election districts of this county last Saturday to choose delegates to the county convention, which assembles at Upper Marlboro' today. In Bladensburg district the following delegates were elected: Francis H. Smith, George Holmes,"Doc" Lancaster, John Ross, Burda Cully. The Simms faction opposed Lancaster, running David Dock against him as a delegate, but Laneaster defeated him by four votes. The ielegation is unpledged.

The new political organization, known as the Democratic Association of Prince George's county, held an interesting meetag at the Knights of Pythias Hall in Lakeland last Saturday evening. Mr. John L. BALTIMORE, September 30, 1893. Senator Gorman came to Baltimore this week, held a long consultation with the local leaders and went back to Washington apparently well satisfied with the outlook for democratic success in the coming city and state elections.

Several business men who are especiall interested in the speedy repeal of the Sher man law called on the Senator and asked him about the prospects for the possage of the bill to wipe that measure from the statute books. Senator Gorman replied that the bill would undoubtedly become the law of the land before the middle of October. The visiting business men went away delighted.

Senator Gorman also held a largely attended reception of office-seekers, who swarmed into the Carroliton Hotel from all quarters of the state. A smile and a shake of the hand was all the encouragement given to any, except the general statement that no more offices would be given out until after the election. It is estimated by the democratic party leaders that there are at least twenty-five applicants for every federal office to be given to citizens of this

According to the Paris press, Admiral Avelan, who will command the Russan squadron, was the hero of a remarkable incident when cruising in the Baltic as a midshipman at the beginning of his naval career. On board the same ship was an excaptain, reduced to the work of a common seaman for insulting his admiral.
